A Note from Deacon Jay VanHoosier

THE LOVE THAT STILL HAS WORK TO DO

I recently had the opportunity to speak with our Precious Blood grief group, and during our conversation, the topic of purgatory came up. When we're grieving someone we love, questions about death and eternal life become deeply personal. We miss their presence, treasure our memories, and wonder what we can still do for them.

As we commemorate All Souls' Day this Monday, our Catholic faith offers a beautiful answer: we can pray for them. Death changes our relationships, but through Christ, it doesn't end the bonds of love. Within the communion of saints, we remain connected, and our prayers for those who've died are a meaningful expression of that connection.

Purgatory speaks to the depth of God's mercy. The souls in purgatory have finished their earthly pilgrimage and are assured of heaven. They're being prepared for the fullness of God's presence - and through our prayers, we can still accompany them in love. The Lord who's loved them throughout their lives continues his loving work, bringing to completion what his grace began.

This also reminds us that intercession is a key component of service for a disciple. We often think of service as preparing a meal, visiting someone who's lonely, or helping a neighbor. These are essential expressions of faith. But bringing another person before God in prayer is also a real act of love. Intercession asks us to look beyond ourselves and entrust someone else's needs to the Lord.

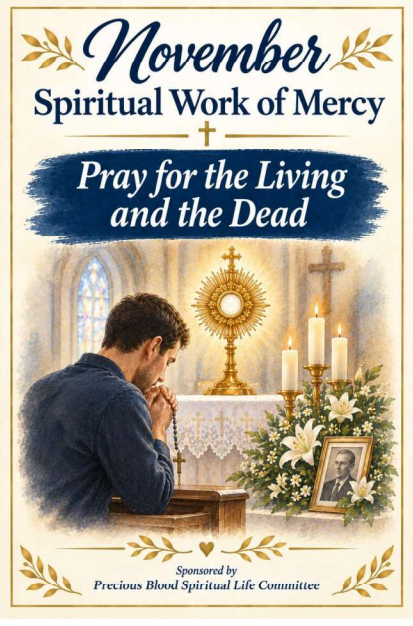

That service continues even after someone dies. We can no longer hold their hand or sit beside them at the table, but we can still pray for them, have Mass offered for them, and offer our sacrifices on their behalf. Our love still has work to do.

This All Souls' Day, let's turn remembrance into intercession. When a familiar face comes to mind or a memory brings tears, make that moment a prayer: "Lord, bring them into the fullness of your light and peace." Whom do you miss, and how will you turn your love for that person into prayer today?

Blessings,

Deacon Jay

SOCIAL CONCERNS MINISTRY

Precious Blood Social Ministry committee invites all the members of the parish to prepare and share a Blessing Bag. As we learned at Mass this past weekend, the meaning of such an item. (If you want to hear the homily again, please go to our parish Facebook page)

A gallon zip lock bag containing a list of small practical suggestions for us to share with someone experiencing homelessness can go a long way. These items will not end homelessness, but it may help our sister or brother realize that they are seen, and they matter. You are asked to carry it with you in your car and give to someone asking for help or take it to one of our shelters in the city and ask the staff to give it to one of the guests. Many of these items can be bought at dollar stores or with coupons. Items needed include: Bag of Quarters for Laundromats, first aid items, mini bottle of water, bab wipes, hand sanitizer, toiletries, hand warmers, socks, granola/energy bars, tuna and cracker packs, nuts, fruit cups, hot cocoa, tea, instant coffee, or flavor water packets.

A Blessing Bag is one simple way to put that love into action. Our baptism marked us forever as a child of God, 24/7. That reality gives a mission to help people know Christ by our words and actions. Invite your children/grandchildren to help fill it and talk with them about the person who will receive the bag. This is one way to follow Jesus and allow him to shape our choices.

FAITH FORMATION PIZZA NIGHT & FIREFIGHTER VISIT!

On October 21, our Precious Blood Faith Formation classes welcomed Andy Johnson, Senior Firefighter with Station 3 of the Owensboro Fire Department, along with Lieutenant Dakota Bratcher, Engineer Matt Statdfield, Firefighter Josh Hayden, and Firefighter Blake Henry!

Andy shared how his Catholic faith impacts his work as a firefighter and reflected on growing up here at Precious Blood as a member of our parish family. The Station 3 crew also gave our children a look into the life of a firefighter, shared important fire safety tips, and answered lots of questions.

The children even got to see a firefighter put on all of his protective gear and explore a fire engine up close! 🚒 Each child went home with a firefighter hat to remember this special evening.

A big THANK YOU to Andy and the entire Station 3 crew for spending time with our children and sharing their faith, knowledge, and dedication to serving our community. It was a wonderful night of learning, fellowship, and fun at Precious Blood!
